She left behind a legacy of passion for her work and an image of serenity, which inspires her many fans. With support from tens of thousands of industry professionals and many academics, Rita devoted her life to making the PMP exam her profession and guiding countless thousands of people through the PMBOK's four-stage process. Rita was a dynamic businesswoman and humanist who dedicated her life to helping people excel in the profession of project management. She started her career as a stage performer, working with the circus. When the circus moved to Florida, Rita followed and eventually became a headlining performer with the circus. Rita worked for the circus for many years, but eventually decided to pursue her true passion: the performing arts. When Rita's son asked her what she was going to do after she retired from the circus, she responded that she wanted to become a teacher. After teaching drama and performing, Rita decided to learn project management. She credits a project manager at her daughter's school with turning her attention to the PMBOK book. When she realized that a project management professional needed much more than a project management certificate to succeed in the industry, Rita became determined to earn a PMP credential. As a natural risk-taker, Rita often worked on projects outside her comfort zone, trying new things and enjoying herself along the way. Rita often used humor to break the ice and build rapport with the audiences she performed for, but she was serious about her work. She often would joke about some aspect of a presentation she was preparing for, but she would deliver a remarkable performance that would capture her audiences. It is difficult to imagine a professional performer with Rita's experience, industry and enthusiasm in less than two years. Her energy and fun-loving attitude inspired the PMBOK® community to create the book. Rita made significant contributions to the PMBOK® Guide before her untimely death, including a significant portion of the content in chapter 9. She wrote several chapters and the entire chapter 9, as well as the entire chapter 7. She also wrote or co-wrote several chapters in the PMP Exam Prep Book including: —Chapter 4—Planning: Project Scope, Roles, Responsibilities, and Delivery —Chapter 5—Planning: Organizing Work —Chapter 7—Management of Work Breakdown Structures —Chapter 9—Quality and Risk Management 82157476af
